GAS COMPANY HAS A RIVAL.

It Will Fight for Business All Over the County.

A New Corporation Whose Stockholders Represent a Great Deal of Money.

The Oakland Gas, Light and Heat Company has a new competitor, with capital stock of $500,000 and backed by a large number of very wealthy men. It is the Alameda County Gas Company. It has begun work in Oakland and will, the directors state, enter Berkeley and Alameda as soon as arrangements are completed.

The new company proposes to supply gas at $1.25 per thousand, to establish uniform rates for light and illumination and to erect a gas plant at a cost of several hundred thousand dollars.

The directors of the corporation are Sidney M. Smith, president of the Cutting Packing Company and the Pacific Metal Works of San Francisco; George W. McNear, the wheat king; George H. Collins, of Higgins & Collins, lumber men, and president of the Sanger Lumber Company; J. A. Folger, of the firm of J. A. Folger, coffee and spice merchants; Charles M. Cooke, the Hawaiian sugar planter; P. E. Bowles, the banker, and W. H. Chickering, the banker. They have incorporated with $500,000 capital stock and elected Sidney Smith, president; G. W. McNear, vice-president; P. E. Bowles, treasurer, and J. O. Cadman secretary, and opened temporary offices in the Macdonough building.

Secretary Cadman of the new company had the following to say of its plans:

"As the name implies it is the purpose of the company to extend its service through Alameda county. After our Oakland plant is in operation we expect to supply Alameda, Berkeley and other towns. The company is composed of men of financial ability to carry out its plans, and with the proper response stand ready to have a plant in operation in four months. This will be entirely new in every particular. We have several sites under bond. The new works will involve an outlay of several hundred thousand dollars.

"We are prepared to make contracts from one year to twenty at $1.25 a thousand and will give signers the option of any reduction we may subsequently make in rates. So it will be seen that there will be no possible combination of the water company kind with increase of rates."

BLANDING AND MRS. INGALLS.

A Controversy Over Debts and a Mortgage.

Mrs. Ingalls Tells of Her Business Dealings With Her Attorney.

The case of Sarah T. Ingalls against her creditors, which has divulged so many startling features, still engaged Judge Greene's time yesterday. Mrs. Ingalls herself was placed upon the stand, and she very materially added to the long chapter of alleged shady maneuvers of Attorney Blanding, the man of miracle fame.

She first recited a whole list of bills which Blanding ran up on her credit, but which he never repaid to her. He told her he would make it all right for her, but not a cent has yet been forthcoming. Blanding claiming that on procuring a loan on certain property of Mrs. Ingalls he had released himself from all obligations to her.

"Why didn't you give Mrs. Ingalls a list of these articles referred to in the agreement of August 7th which you promised to pay not exceeding $1000?" queried the court of Blanding. "I gave her one," was the reply. "No, you didn't," sharply interrupted Mrs. Ingalls, then on the stand.

Mrs. Ingalls declared that she had been influenced to sign away her mortgage by Blanding, and that when she asked Mrs. Nagle to request him to reimburse her to that extent, Mrs. Nagle being such a dear friend of his, replied: "Oh, he will pay you all up. Just have patience."

Rumors of suspicious business relations between Blanding and Mrs. Nagle are current. There is also not a little wonderment as to the knowledge Blanding has as to the whereabouts of Mrs. Nagle's mysterious disappearance about one year ago.

THE MASONIC FESTIVAL.

Approaching Celebration of A Plan to Aid the County the Masons.

The Greatest of Enthusiasm Prevails Among All Classes—All Working Together.

Not in a score of years has there been shown such splendid organization and steadfastness of purpose, to say nothing of enthusiasm as that which marks the preparations for the Masonic festival which is to be held in San Francisco early next month. The executive committee has arranged an enthusiasm among all classes which is quite unique. Masonic men and merchants alike are taking a keen interest in the project, and the country is not slow in responding to the invitations for cooperation.

which have been extended. The promise of a week of holiday work, which will be irrefragable, amounts to a certainty.

The Grand Master of California has given his hearty support and approval of the project and has issued from his office a letter highly commending the fête.

Charles L. Patton, the chairman of the executive committee, has gathered around him a corps of earnest workers, and he himself is devoting the whole of his time to the successful completion of the worthy enterprise. Day and night this gentleman is at headquarters directing and planning. New features are being designed and placed in process of execution daily. W. Frank Pierce, the Inspector General of the southern jurisdiction of the Scottish Rite, is among the most prominent workers, and by his devotion to matters which have been placed in his hands, several obstacles have been overcome and the prospects materially brightened.

The Widows and Orphans Home will most certainly be helped in a generous way by this festival, and those who are in San Francisco during the week will find that great hospitality for which the Masonic fraternity is so notable.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR UNION SOCIAL.

Tomorrow evening, April 8th, in the First Congregational Church parlors, the Christian Endeavor societies of the Berkeley Union will hold a grand social.

This is the first of a series of annual socials which the unions are endeavoring to give. Light refreshments will be served. An excellent musical program has been arranged.

The feature of the evening will be the installation of the new officers of the union. They are: H. D. Woodworth, president; W. N. Martin, vice president; Miss Ruth Engle, secretary; A. W. May, treasurer.

The union officers bespeak a large attendance.

Roderick's Case.

The case of Manuel Roderick, the young man charged with having betrayed Minnie May Birch, a 14-year-old girl in West Berkeley, on the 5th of January, and who failed to secure his release Tuesday on a writ of habeas corpus, is being tried in Judge Ellsworth's court.

TUNNEL DAY AT THE TRACK.

A Plan to Aid the County Tunnel Project.

All Alameda County Asked to Join in Carrying Out the Enterprise.

The Merchants' Exchange of Oakland has declared in favor of vigorously pushing the long discussed county tunnel project. It is proposed as a means of passing funds for the tunnel that Tunnel Road Day be had at the track. The day will be spent in the morning in the exchange of gifts, and in the afternoon in the exchange of goods.

Your Committee on Tunnel Road Day beg leave to bring to the following: There is no time to be lost. Preparations should be made at once, as soon as the day is announced by the Mayor.

Mayor should be asked to declare a "Tunnel Day" and to have stores, factories, mills, shops, should be asked to close their places of business; the ladies of the Elks' Society and all other ladies' organizations should be asked to participate; the Labor Exchange and all other organizations; the Acme, Reliance, Turners, Young Men's Institute, Young Men's Christian Association and Good Roads Association; all other societies which have not been heretofore mentioned should consider themselves invited in Berkeley, Alameda and Oakland.

San Francisco can also afford to donate handsomely, for it will open a pleasure drive for her people and the many tourists stopping at her hotels. A four-to-hand drive with an easy grade that will bring them to the top of Mount Diablo, and it is announced by those who have been witnesses that a sunset or sunrise at that particular spot is worth one-half of a person's life. This certainly ought to be a great inducement for San Francisco to assist.

"If this plan as pictured is carried out there can be little doubt but that amount for building the tunnel can be raised in a day, and no one will be any poorer, and the one dollar invested will bring interest at the rate of 100 per cent."

Last, but not least, the press must be asked to assist, for it lies in its hand to make it a success.

MISSION WORK IN CHINA.

Dr. Fryer Lectures on the Subject.

Buddhists, Mohammedans and Jews Have Been Engaged in the Work for Centuries.

Dr. Fryer delivered an address on "Two Thousand Years of Mission Work in China," before the Young Men's Christian Association, yesterday afternoon.

He spoke in part as follows: The Buddhists, Mohammedans, and Jews have all been engaged in carrying spiritual enlightenment to China. Two thousand years ago, China had two forms of religion, Confucianism, and Taoism. The latter is the older of the two, and regards nature as actuated by a great law underlying everything. Confucius started as a political reformer. He arrived at a philosophy which teaches that the ancients must be followed in all things.

Buddhism reached China about 61 A. D. The emperor became interested and as a result the cult became popular but soon became corrupted. The two central ideas are the good government of God and man's immortality. It greatly resembles the Roman Catholic form of Christianity.

A colony of Jews next settled in China and introduced their faith. The western part of China became colonized by Mohammedans and they still hold their ground in great force.

The Nestorians came next in order. They are the same as Catholic Christians except for their strange ideas of the incarnation of Christ. They translated the Bible into Chinese in 634 A. D. They disappeared under persecution.

Roman Catholics reached China about the thirteenth century and preached with great success. But these also were banished through persecution, and their work was a failure. When the ports were opened to Europeans in this century they went back in great force, and they are now a great power in China. They buy young children as they might poultry, and bring them up in the Catholic schools.

The Greek Church also has done some good missionary work in China. Beginning under the authority of Peter the Great, they established schools and churches in Peking.

The Protestant work began about the beginning of this century, under the auspices of a London society. They established schools in the strait settlements. Now things are in most flourishing condition.

At no distant time we may expect China to become a Christian nation. The only successful religion in China—the only one that has met the needs—is the Christian religion. China must be imbued with character and conscience before she will be what she ought.

A BERKELEYAN'S GOOD FORTUNE.

Will Rodgers of this city, who is employed as a telephone lineman in San Francisco, was robbed of a pair of climbing irons a couple of weeks ago by some one who took the irons from the sidewalk, where Rodgers had placed them. Yesterday Rodgers accompanied a friend to a second-hand store on Kearney street to purchase a lantern. While in the store Rodgers saw his irons, which had been sold by the thief. The police were notified and the Berkeleyan will regain his property.

Homing Pigeon Stations.

A Carlisle of this city is circulating for signatures among the commercial bodies of San Francisco a petition to be forwarded to Secretary of the Navy Long for the removal of the pigeon cote at Mare Island to Goat Island, and for the establishment of an additional homing pigeon cote on the South Farallone Islands. In support of the petition are set forth the advantages to commerce generally and the light-house and weather bureau service that would accrue from the granting of the request.

The annual meeting of the First Presbyterian church last evening adjourned to meet in the Sunday school room next Wednesday evening at 7:45.

AN ARDUOUS TASK.

Judging from the experience of a Berkeley man who is hunting for gold in the far north, Klondiking isn't what it is cracked up to be. The party in question is packing the outfits of himself and partner—over 2000 pounds in all—over the Chilkoot pass. The modus operandi is to take 100 pounds, carry it a distance of one mile, drop it by the side of the trail; then return for another load until both outfits are moved one mile; then the process is repeated. As the outfit is to be packed twenty-six miles, and on some parts of the trail when the wind blows it is necessary to crawl on hands and knees, the difficulty of the undertaking may be appreciated.

A WARNING.

The necessity of taking every precaution in regard to water used for drinking purposes, is again emphasized by the death of Miss Rosenstirn. Had a little care and judgment been used a bright and happy career would not have been ruthlessly cut off. The fate of the hapless young lady should be a warning, and we hope it will be an effectual one.

A PROPOSED REMEDY.

[Written for the Gazette by D. Allison.]

The school board election is a thing of the past. The result was a surprise to some, and not a few think it was a discredit to Berkeley that we should put up with inferior school accommodations when we are abundantly able to have better—more especially when the attractive method is presented of making the future pay the cost.

No use kicking. Levy a direct tax, provide the necessary primary and grammar school accommodations and another addition to the old High School and direct that it be taught a just and righteous revenue system for the town of Berkeley and in a few years there will be no difficulty in raising funds for public improvements.

During the campaign it was repeatedly asserted that a commodious and ornamental High School building would enhance the established educational reputation of Berkeley, attract population and increase the value of property to a greater extent than the cost of the building.

The Board of Education, in an address to the voters, used this language, "The increased valuation of the property of Berkeley resulting from such a public improvement will more than pay the additional tax." What was here meant by property was, of course, property in land. No one is foolish enough to suppose it would raise the value of improvements or personal property. The value of these at any time is expressed in what it would cost to reproduce them. With increase of population the tendency is toward reduced cost of production. Plainly this would tend to lessen the cash value of those already produced. Whatever may be said of the merits or demerits of the bonding scheme, I firmly believe with its advocates that a land value, equal to or greater than the cost of the building, would have been created by its erection.

WHY?

EDITOR GAZETTE:—I have a good deal of complaint because the Public Library is not kept open all day. Why is it? We pay $40 a month for rent of rooms and pay the salaries of two librarians for only half a day's service. It certainly seems like money thrown away.

either swartay by nature or much sunmustache. He had a distinguished air, but his face was plain, and at the moment he appeared far from attractive. It was a harsh, fierce expression, while his large, dark eyes looked eager and strained.

As he paused to let the train clear away he was joined by the other, a middle-aged man who had alighted from a third class carriage, an exceedingly tall, loosely built individual, who walked in a weak, shambling fashion.

His face was rugged and gaunt, lighted by a pair of dreamy eyes and surmounted by a shock of wild red hair. In spite of these peculiarities he looked eminently respectable. He touched his hat as he joined the gentleman first de-

time," returned Carrow as they crossed to the other side, giving a brief account of the station and the train.

"I hope Mr. Hastings is getting better, sir," began MacDougal, as they walked on the road which led through the park.

"I'm afraid not. I hear he is in a bad way."

"So I believe, sir. Her ladyship went up to see him one day last week, but she wasn't let to have speech of him, and he seemed so bright and well when he was down here last spring."

"Well, he is dead now," returned Carrow. "And how is it, Mac-Dougal, that you have rope enough to wander so far from the postoffice?"

"Oh, I had business with the postmaster at Nutfield. He's over me, you know. My son is quite able to work the telegraph now when I am away. I am training him, you see. It's the best thing I can do for my poor mother's boy."

"And your daughter? You have a daughter?"

"Ah, thanks to Lady Hastings and
Miss Ruth, I still have a daughter.
Miss Ruth, I still have a daughter.
Their care and kindness kept her in life. Lady Hastings has paid the debt she thinks was due to my father for saving the general at Nutfield in full."

"Glad to hear it," said Carrow, and they walked on a few paces, and then MacDougal said: "I wish you good evening, Captain Carrow. There's nothing out of my place across the fields here."

"Ah, good day to you!" returned Carrow, with a friendly nod, and they parted.

Carrow swung on at a sharp pace along the road, which led up a gentle incline, between detached houses more or less ornamental with gardens and spreading trees, till he reached an open space
at the top, where, facing a fine avenue of huge old elms, arching over like a cathedral aisle, stood a pretty, old house, to which additions had been judiciously made. It was set in delightful surroundings, velvet lawns, big forest trees, abundant evergreens and fragrant flower beds and looked out from the eminence of which it stood over a wide stretch of wooded landscape, now bathed in the rich light of a delicious September day.

"Are the ladies at home?" asked Car-row when the door was opened by a grave, gray-haired man out of livery.

"My lady has not come in yet, but Miss Hastings is at home, sir."

"Awfully unlucky in one way," moun-tered Carrow as he followed the butler
to the room generally used in the morning by Lady Hastings and her daughter,
a cool, shady apartment, with a bay window overlooking the garden and comfortable nooks to read or think in,
beautifully furnished with flowers and ferns
and sweet with the perfume of the conservatory, a door into which stood open.

The room was unattended, but the sound of a piano and a fresh, pleasant voice singing "Robin Adair" indicated that the daughter of the house was not far off.

"I will tell Miss Hastings, sir," said
the servant, and Carrow was left to look about him, which he did with sometimes eyes that ached as they gazed at the books and writing materials and needlework scattered about and suggestive of quiet, well-employed, happy lives—very different from his own stormy, troubled existence!

He walked to the window and stood there, putting his long mustache and gazing at the door into the conservatory,
through which a tall young lady came swiftly to him, an exceedingly fair girl, pale and delicate looking,
with light brown hair, but saved from colorlessness by very deep blue eyes
and dark eyelashes and brows.

There was a soft composure in her air and carriage that made itself felt at first sight, a quiet stateliness which gave importance to her slight, supple figure and simple costume of black and white muslin with a black sash, the slight mourning still worn for her late father.

"Why, Val! I thought you were never coming again!" She put her hand into his with a smile as she spoke.

"Val," she repeated, looking steady-ly into his eyes, which dwelt upon her with a curious, hungry look, "what is the matter? Something is wrong, very wrong."
